The need for Coronavirus screening continues in the State of Alabama. Drive through and drive-up screenings have provided a way for employees to quickly and safely conduct this service. In addition to screening services, drive through and drive-up formats have been used to provide vaccinations to a large number of individuals. While convenient, there are specific risks and dangers that are associated with this method. With the upcoming fall flu season and the potential of a coronavirus vaccine, drive through and drive-ups may be viewed as the most effective method of providing services. This program will provide information on safety measures employees should consider and practice when conducting drive through and drive up screening or vaccination services during the Covid-19 response.
